

Oh The Places I Didn't Go...

This was an exciting year for Eric and Lauren. Not for me. There was lots of traveling around and seeing stuff. Frankly, I don't get the appeal- but they seem to like it. Here's some pictures from their stupid trips.

In February, we went to see the nieces Rachel and Claire in Silver Spring Maryland. This is Claire, the baby. She's cute and poops whenever she wants. Lucky.

San Francisco- the Golden Gate Bridge, Alcatraz, Fisherman's Wharf. Three trips there this year and they didn't bring a camera to any one of them. Pathetic.

They even had to steal a picture from a website for this stupid letter.

This is Lauren's family in Sequim. They came from around the country to sit on this couch. Weird. We also spent some time in Seattle with some friends sitting on their couch, but they didn't bring a camera there either. Again, I say, pathetic.

We went to Solvang California three time this year to go wine tasting. It's the Danish Capitol of California. In case you were wondering where the Danish Capitol of California was, now you know. I didn't know they made wine in Denmark.

For their anniversary, they took a romantic weekend trip to Tijuana. Yeah, it doesn't make much sense to me either. At least they brought a camera to photograph Eric with various beverages in his hands. Like we've never seen that before.

It was nice to see Eric's grandparents in Albuquerque- world famous for its Balloon Festival, Casino and Heart Hospital. I helped say the Motzi and watched embarrassing old home-movies of Uncle Peter. I know how he feels. I'm naked, too.

I hope you enjoyed the trips Eric and Lauren took in 2006 more than I did. In 2007 they plan to ditch me for a week and go to Paris. Hopefully, they'll remember to bring a camera but I wouldn't count on it.

Happy Holidays!

Love,

Lenny
